CLIENT PORTAL BLUEPRINT

Luxury web portal sitemap and page-by-page layout for spouse-centered PCS support

Designed to translate directly into a branded web experience: calm, premium, highly organized, and emotionally reassuring from first login through final relocation milestone.

What this blueprint includes

- portal sitemap and navigation structure
- login experience and emotional trust design
- dashboard, timeline, documents, updates, tasks, and concierge contact pages
- page-by-page annotations your web designer can build from

Official visual direction based on the approved Image 2 brand kit

WHY THIS STRUCTURE WORKS

- Low cognitive load
  The spouse sees only six clear navigation choices. Fewer choices create calm and make the portal feel managed rather than overwhelming.
- Emotionally reassuring
  Every page answers one anxiety: what happens next, where my documents live, what I still need to do, and who can help me right now.
- Operationally scalable
  This architecture is simple enough for a VA to maintain yet premium enough to support higher pricing and national expansion.

Portal page 1: login and welcome

DESIGN INTENT

- Premium but not flashy
  The navy hero panel and gold action button imply high-touch service. The restraint keeps it credible for officers, NCO families, and dual-income households.
- Reassurance first
  Before the spouse enters anything, the page tells her exactly what the portal will do: centralize the move and reduce chaos.
- Direct replication note
  Build as a split-screen desktop page. On mobile, stack the navy trust panel above the sign-in card.

Portal page 2: dashboard

The homepage should answer: where am I in the move, what happens next, and who is handling it?

REPLICATION NOTES

- Desktop layout
  Use a left nav, centered timeline rail, and wide milestone cards. Avoid cramming too much text into each milestone.
- Client psychology
  Timelines reduce move anxiety because they convert uncertainty into a sequence with ownership and dates.

Designer notes

Use this page as a clean grid of file cards with consistent iconography, file type tags, and clear actions. The spouse should feel every document is professionally prepared and easy to locate.

Why this page matters

Luxury services feel premium when communication is predictable. This page should read like a polished concierge log, not a cluttered support inbox.

Portal page 6: my tasks

Only the client's responsibilities should live here—clear, few, and impossible to miss

Design rule

Keep this page intentionally simple. The client should never see long admin lists here. Show only the few things she must review, approve, upload, or confirm.

Support logic for the web designer

Desktop: keep team profile and secure message form side by side.
Mobile: stack team card first, message form second.
Add an emergency note for true move-week issues only. The visual tone should stay calm and premium—not urgent or chaotic.

Build notes for your web designer

Translate this directly into a luxury, spouse-centered portal experience

GLOBAL UI RULES

1. Use the approved Image 2 logo system.
2. Desktop layout: left navigation + wide main content.
3. Mobile layout: stacked cards with generous spacing.
4. Keep typography elegant in headers, simple in body copy.

EXPERIENCE RULES

The spouse should feel the portal is calm, private, and already organized for her. Avoid clutter, dense copy, or tech-heavy wording. The interface should feel closer to a luxury concierge dashboard than a generic support portal.

Key reusable components

Status strip — A gold or soft-cream alert bar for the next milestone.

Update card — Chronological communication blocks with timestamp and clean writing.

Summary card — Small cards for move date, status, concierge team, and response time.

Task row — Single responsibility rows with due date, priority, and one CTA.

File card — Uniform cards with file type, title, and open/download actions.

Message module — Secure contact block with concise subject and message fields.

Deliverable note

This PDF is a visual blueprint. Your web designer can replicate it in Softr, Webflow, HighLevel, Figma, or a custom build. The structure is intentionally simple so it can be implemented quickly without losing the premium brand feel.
